Meaning "cool" in Spanish, Chido at OKANA is designed to be a stylish, modern taqueria that will be ideal for quick bites and leisurely meals infused with fine spirits. Inspired by Mexican street food and quick service taco stands, the casual restaurant invites guests to explore fresh and invigorating flavors in a hip, vibrant setting. Provided By OKANA

As city leaders anticipate population and economic growth to continue in Oklahoma City, the capital of the Sooner State continues to attract new businesses to the area.

These are a few of the top new developments coming in 2025 that readers are excited about:

OKANA

Set on the banks of the Oklahoma River, OKANA Resort and Indoor Waterpark will open Feb. 21. The $400 million project funded in large part by the Chickasaw Nation features an 11-story hotel, 4.5-acre outdoor lagoon, dozens of restaurants and bars and an indoor waterpark. The resort estimated the getaway will add about 800 direct and indirect jobs once it begins operating.

Guests at OKANA will have their pick of sweets at the OKANA Candy Company. Provided by OKANA. Provided By OKANA
